Versatile application options and particularly user-friendly

The HGW manual grid cutter can be adapted for the processing of different products thanks to the wide range of grid cutting inserts available. It is suitable for various application options and cuts, peels, punches and cores fruit, vegetables and lettuce. In addition to the standard cutting types – slices, cubes, sticks, chunks or segments – many inserts are also available for special punching forms such as corers for cabbage or peppers, corers for kiwis or cauliflowers and mango corers. With the inserts for cutting to length, peeling, coring and slicing, a wide variety of products such as pineapple or cabbage are processed efficiently. Inserts are also available for special cuts such as diamonds, boats and disks in various sizes, as well as decorative shapes (stars, hearts and many more).

The product to be processed is positioned manually on the mounted knife. By operating the lever, the product is cut into the corresponding shape according to the knife used. The cut product falls down – either into a prepared container or onto an optionally available conveyor belt.

Product groups

In the standard version, the HGW is a tabletop device; a mobile base frame is optionally available.

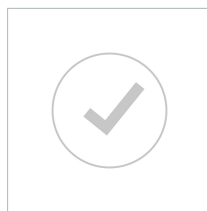

The HGW is particularly easy to operate, quick to clean and requires no maintenance at all, which makes it particularly user-friendly.

Benefits

Flexibly adjustable to process different products

Thanks to the adjustable height and the variety of grid cutting inserts, the HGW can process a wide range of products with different punching forms. In addition to the standard types of cuts, many special punching forms, including customer-specific designs, are available.

Quick change of product or cutting form

Cleaning of the HGW and changing the inserts can be carried out very quickly. No additional tools are required to replace the knife insert, pusher and pusher plate.
